

Highlight

Bullish November

The S&P 500 dropped 2.2% in October however it remains up 9.2% year to date. Investors are optimistic the market can resume its bullish early-year momentum in November given that the fourth quarter has historically been one of the best three-month stretches of the year for the S&P 500.

We are bullish on U.S. stocks and stocks around the world are becoming more attractive. We expect U.S. Fed to hold rates and might possibly as early as next year.

Bitcoin

Bitcoin has been doing well. We think the recent pause in rate hike might lend further strength to its upward momentum.

China

The Chinese market has not performed well lately due to economic slowdown. However, we still think the Chinese economy will eventually recover, however it will take relatively long due to structural economic problems.

Energy Prices

Oil prices are trading lower. As mentioned previously, would further decline if the global economy slows further however this would not be likely if geopolitical situation in the middle east escalated.

We still like U.S. equities due to their global and international business presence. Some U.S. equities are currently trading at compelling valuation. In addition to U.S. equities, we like technology and life science sectors due to their future potential growth and more importantly they are trading at very compelling price.
