

Highlight

Asia Looking Attractive

We believe that inflation, interest rates and the labor market will likely continue to remain a major concern for global markets. At its last meeting in January, the Federal Open Market Committee opted to maintain interest rates at their current range of 5.25% to 5.5%, its highest target range in 22 years. Economists are expecting the FOMC to continue to maintain interest rates at current levels at its next meeting that concludes on March 20. We still that U.S. market is toppish while markets in Asia is trading at compelling valuation.

Bitcoin

Bitcoin continues to do well. We think that Bitcoin is looking toppish as global economic growth continues to slow.

China

We still expect Chinese stocks to remain in the doldrums as the Chinese property crisis intensifies further. However, we think that the Chinese market holds plenty of opportunities in the long term

Energy Prices

Oil prices are consolidating. There is talk of OPEC cutting supply due to expected slowdown in global demand.

Investment Thesis

We still like U.S. equities due to their global and international business presence. Some U.S. equities are currently trading at compelling valuation. In addition to U.S. equities, we like technology and life science sectors due to their future potential growth and more importantly they are trading at very compelling price.
